Summary:

A journalism-trained communications professional with 9 years of experience turning complex ideas into content that connects, moves, and matters. Work spans national campaigns, long-form editorial reports, plain language resources, financial and data narratives, regulated healthcare content, and enterprise communications at a global scale. The format always changes. The standard does not.

This kit presents a curated snapshot, a selection of all the work I have done across sectors and formats. There is more where this came from.

01 - BUSINESS & FINANCE

Some of the most engaging content comes from the least glamorous source material. These pieces took global GDP data, labour market reports, credit card trends, and market intelligence and turned them into stories that professional and everyday audiences actually wanted to read. Each required translating raw economic and financial data into accessible, authoritative narratives, with plain language discipline applied to complex investment and market concepts.

Featured Pieces

A. FINANCIAL DATA JOURNALISM - VISUAL CAPITALIST

1. Piece: The Biggest Tech Talent Hubs in the U.S. and Canada

Translated complex labour market and economic data into a ranked, accessible narrative for a professional audience. Required synthesizing multiple data sources into a single authoritative story with zero jargon.

2. Piece: Mapped: Global GDP by Region

Converted raw World Bank GDP data into a clear, engaging visual narrative. The challenge was making the macroeconomic scale feel immediate and relevant to readers who were not economists.

3. Piece: Visualizing the Biggest Gaming Company Acquisitions of All Time

The week Microsoft announced a $69 billion acquisition, the data already told a bigger story. Translated two decades of gaming industry consolidation into a ranked narrative that made billion-dollar deal-making feel immediate and inevitable for readers who follow business but not gaming.

B. Sidepart - Fintech and Mortgage Content:

PLAIN LANGUAGE FINANCIAL WRITING - COMPLIANCE-DRIVEN PRODUCTS

Produced plain language financial content for fintech and mortgage clients, translating complex compliance-driven products, including rate structures, qualification criteria, and borrowing rules, into accessible narratives for everyday Canadian audiences. Partnered with financial SMEs to develop thought leadership and market commentary across fintech and lending platforms.

1. Piece: Ripping the Payday Loan Band-Aid Off

Translated one of Canada's most misunderstood financial products into a plain-language editorial that named the real cost, 468% annually, not 18%, without lecturing the reader who needed it most.

2. Piece: Good vs Bad Debt - The Lowdown

Turned a topic most Canadians avoid into a structured, accessible guide. The challenge was to make debt feel manageable rather than shameful for a reader already in debt.

3. Piece: Carrying Balances in 2020 — The Credit Card Conversation

Translated consumer credit trends and financial behaviour data into a plain-language editorial, accurate and useful for everyday Canadian audiences.

02 — EDITORIAL GOVERNANCE & LONG-FORM REPORTS

Not all editorial work announces itself. Some of it lives in the structure of a document, the consistency of a voice across 250 pages, the decision to cut a paragraph that undermines the argument three sections later. That is the work in this section.

A. 250-Page Bilingual Mental Health Report

BGC CANADA & TELUS FRIENDLY FUTURE FOUNDATION -EDITORIAL GOVERNANCE

Governed the full editorial production of a 250-page bilingual mental health report, applying AODA accessibility standards and Canadian Press editorial guidelines throughout. The report addressed mental health across Indigenous, 2SLGBTQ+, and rural communities, requiring culturally sensitive language, precision in clinical terminology, and strict compliance with accessibility and bilingual standards.

Editorial responsibilities: Structural editing, plain language rewriting, AODA compliance review, CP style enforcement, bilingual consistency, stakeholder sign-off across 5,000 member clubs nationwide.

- 250 pages governed by AODA and CP standards
- 5,000 member clubs served nationally
- Bilingual English/French production
- Addressed mental health across Indigenous, 2SLGBTQ+, and rural communities

NOTE: Available upon request and with appropriate confidentiality considerations.

B. 60-Page Decarbonization & ESG Report

VISUAL CAPITALIST - 30 LARGEST US UTILITIES

Led the end-to-end editorial production of a 60-page decarbonization and ESG report covering the 30 largest investor-owned utilities in the United States. Required translating complex financial modelling, emissions data, and regulatory frameworks into a clear, authoritative narrative readable by both technical and non-technical audiences.

Scope of work: Research synthesis, structural editing, plain language rewriting, compliance review, narrative development, and senior stakeholder sign-off.

- 2.3M viewers reached on publication
- 30 of the largest US investor-owned utilities are covered
- 60 pages of complex financial and environmental data

C. Sanofi Canada - Enterprise Change Communications

STRATEGIC COMMUNICATIONS LEAD - 83,000 EMPLOYEES

Owned editorial standards and content quality across 17 business units during a large-scale operating model transformation, building a library of communication templates and toolkits and leading a 35-member cross-functional team to maintain storytelling consistency and plain-language discipline at scale. Produced 24 plain language learning modules spanning presentations, video explainers, and FAQs, translating complex regulatory and operational changes into audience-specific content for a global employee base.

Editorial responsibilities: Template and toolkit development, plain language rewriting, tone of voice governance, compliance review for content tied to R&D and pharma operations, stakeholder sign-off across 17 business units.

Internal work - available for discussion upon request.

03 — HEALTHCARE & PLAIN LANGUAGE CONTENT

Healthcare content has no margin for error and no room for jargon. Every piece in this section was produced for clinical or regulated environments where accuracy, accessibility, and compliance were non-negotiable. The discipline is the same as financial content: translate the complex for the person who needs to act on it, not the expert who already understands it.

A. CareFoundry Healthworks

PLAIN LANGUAGE NARRATIVES, PODCAST SCRIPTS, WEBSITE CONTENT

Developed and managed editorial content for a healthcare innovation platform, turning complex medical technologies and patient access challenges into clear, evidence-based narratives. Produced 38 plain language narratives and evidence-based resources translating clinical concepts, regulatory frameworks, and healthcare technology into accessible content for diverse audiences.

Website: CareFoundry Healthworks: Full website build and editorial content

Example Service Page: Knowledge Hub for Medical Innovations

Example Article: Increasing Affordability of NPWT Solution

B. Medical Education Podcast - CareFoundry Healthworks

EDITORIAL FRAMEWORK AND SCRIPT PIPELINE

Developed the full editorial framework and script pipeline for a medical education podcast produced in a regulated healthcare environment. Responsibilities included establishing editorial standards for spoken delivery, ensuring conversational clarity and pacing across episodes, translating clinical terminology into accessible language for non-specialist audiences, and maintaining clinical accuracy throughout production.

Editorial responsibilities: Script editing, plain language rewriting, tone and pacing review, clinical accuracy sign-off, and editorial standards documentation.

Proprietary production — available for discussion upon request.

04 — ARTICLES & THOUGHT LEADERSHIP

A cross-section of editorial work spanning science, technology, public policy, and advocacy. Each piece reflects a consistent editorial approach: take something complex, find the human angle, and make it worth reading. Range across subject matter. The same plain-language standard throughout.

A. Science, Technology & Space

VISUAL CAPITALIST - TECHNICAL TO ACCESSIBLE

Visual Capitalist Writer Profile: Articles and Content Pieces

1. Visualizing the World's Biggest Pharmaceutical Companies
2. A Visual Introduction to the Dwarf Planets \(Interactive Model\)
3. Synthetic Materials That Will Shape the Future
4. Hydrograph: Graphene Powered Clean Energy Campaign: View the Spotlight

B. Advocacy & Public Policy

LONG-FORM EDITORIAL - GOVERNMENT AND COMMUNITY

1. Pre-Budget Submission for the 2024 Federal Budget
2. Athens City Council Gentrification & Restoration Project
3. BGC CEO Blog - Hidden Poverty in Kids
4. BGC Canada Annual Report: 2023 Annual Report
5. Youth of the Year Initiative: Campaign Details

C. Real Estate and Marketing

MATTAMY HOMES — ADDITIONAL WORK AND ASSETS

1. Corporate Website: Mattamy Homes
2. Example Community Page: Promenade, Barrhaven
3. Design Studio & Inspiration: Mattamy Homes Design Studio
4. Social Media Example: Preserve Community Instagram Post

05 — CAMPAIGNS & NATIONAL STORYTELLING

The work that moves people is the work that trusts them. These campaigns were built on one discipline: find the specific, human moment inside a big brief, then execute it across every format without losing the thread. Three case studies. Three different clients. The same editorial standard throughout.

CASE STUDY 01: UNSHAREABLE STORIES

Client: BGC Canada

Role: Copywriter, Creative Lead, Broadcast Script Writer

Deliverables: TVC Scripts, Broadcast Direction, Social Copy, OOH Messaging, Thought Leadership, Campaign Landing Page, Alumni Narratives

THE BRIEF

BGC Canada needed Canadians to feel the cost of growing up without support. Not through statistics. Not through charity speak. Through the specific, quiet moments that kids carry alone because there's nowhere safe to share them.

THE IDEA

Kids shouldn't have unshareable stories.

Simple. The weight comes from what it doesn't say. It doesn't lecture. It doesn't list statistics. It trusts the audience to feel the gap between what a childhood should look like and what too many kids actually experience. The line needed to work across every issue BGC touches. It does, because the structure never changes. Only the story does.

THE EXECUTION

Campaign Hub | Unshareable Stories

Wrote and shaped the alumni narratives featured on the campaign hub. Damion, Daniela, Kowmitha, Teresa. Each story translated a real person's experience into copy that was emotionally honest without being exploitative, holding the same standard of dignity the campaign demanded throughout.

TVC ADVERTISEMENTS

Broadcast - Bullying (30s) | Watch | Full Script + Direction Notes

A schoolyard. A girl sitting alone against a brick wall, writing in a notebook. Two others approach. The leader snatches it, looks at the page mockingly, and drops it to the ground. No dialogue. The camera drops to ground level. The open notebook lands hard on concrete. The bullies' feet walk away. White text appears over the scene.

Kids shouldn't have unshareable stories about bullying. BGC Clubs help them change their lives, for good.

A hand enters the frame and lifts a striped backpack from the ground.

Direction note: Raw, observational, documentary-style. The cruelty is casual, not cartoonish. The sound of the book hitting the ground acts as the dialogue of the scene. It needs to cut through the ambience. That casual quality makes it more impactful than anything an actor could say.

Hunger (30s TVC) | Watch | Full Script + Direction Notes

A locker from the inside out. A kid reaches in, sees what's there, a sad packet of chips, and shoves it back when he hears his friends coming down the hall.

"Hey, you want to have lunch with us?" "Guys, I'm not that hungry."

The locker closes. Text appears across the faded interior.

Kids shouldn't have unshareable stories about hunger. BGC Clubs help them change their lives, for good.

Direction note: Natural, intimate, documentary-inspired. The locker POV creates immediate claustrophobia and privacy. We're inside his secret with him. The dialogue does the work. Nobody believes him. He knows it. Sound is personal and real: locker hinge, bag rustle, soft ambient hallway noise. Music is supportive and never dominant.

SOCIAL CAMPAIGN | Example Post

Same platform. Different stories. Each post introduced a real kid by name, told their story in one breath, and landed on the same line.

"This is Alex, and they're gender fluid. They've always known that they weren't a girl like everyone assumed them to be. Not a day goes by that they don't think... Kids shouldn't have unshareable stories."

"This is Sophia, and she's new to Canada. Her parents don't speak English. School is very tough. If she doesn't get help, she is very worried about ending up... Kids shouldn't have unshareable stories."

"This is Jack. He wants to have the things his friends have. His parents are always working, but there's never any extra money, so he... Kids shouldn't have unshareable stories."

"Kids shouldn't have unshareable stories about hunger. Every year, our Clubs provide nearly 6 million meals and snacks to children and youth."

No call to action. No elaborate hashtag strategy. Just the story and the line. The restraint is the craft.

THE RESULTS

- 30M+ views across campaign channels
 - 35% YoY website traffic growth
 - National media coverage
 - 94% Club satisfaction rate sustained nationally
 - 69% of BGC alumni say a Club saved their life

WHY IT WORKED

The brief could have produced a campaign that made people feel guilty. It didn't. It made them feel something more useful: recognition. Every adult has been one of these kids, or knows one. The copy never told audiences what to think. It put them inside a specific moment, with a specific child, and trusted them to arrive at the feeling themselves. That's the difference between advertising that runs and advertising that stays with people.

CASE STUDY 02: MATTAMY HOMES

Client: The Turn Lab (Agency)

Role: Copywriter

Deliverables: Corporate Website · Community Pages · Design Studio · Social · Sales Collateral

THE BRIEF

Mattamy Homes is one of Canada's largest homebuilders, operating across communities from Ontario to Alberta. The brief was deceptively simple: write the website, the community pages, and the social campaigns.

The real challenge was harder. A home is the biggest purchase most people ever make. The copy couldn't just describe square footage and highway access. It had to make someone feel like they already belonged there before they ever set foot inside.

THE IDEA

Make people feel something before they ever walk through a door.

Every word had to work across buyer types, price points, and communities with completely different characters, while sounding like it came from one voice. Not a builder's voice. A buyer's voice.

THE WORK

Corporate Website | Mattamy Homes

The homepage needed to answer one question immediately: why Mattamy? The answer wasn't product features. It was philosophy.

"Designed with you in mind. Our committed focus on how people really live informs each step of every home we build. From our modern, timeless and charming architecture to the spacious, bright and inviting floor plans and the communities with green space and wellness opportunities, your satisfaction is our priority."

That opening repositions Mattamy from builder to partner. Everything else on the site flows from that promise.

Example Community Pages | Hawthorne East Village, Milton | Community Gallery

Each community page had to sell a life, not just a location. The structure builds deliberately outward - from the home, to the neighbourhood, to the city, to nature. By the end, the reader isn't buying a house. They're buying a version of their life.

"Celebrate each day in Mattamy's Hawthorne East Village, with its picturesque homes and everything your active family needs to grow and thrive along the eastern edge of Milton. Make yourself at home amongst the serene joys and ample amenities of this neighbourhood. Find community and culture at local galleries, theatres and markets. Embrace your life in Hawthorne East Village and watch each day become even more beautiful."

This approach was applied across Mattamy's entire Canadian portfolio. Every community has its own narrative. One brand voice throughout.

Design Studio | Calgary Design Studio

The Design Studio page solved a specific problem: personalization is exciting in theory and paralyzing in practice. The copy had to make hundreds of decisions feel like a privilege, not a burden.

The hero copy reframes the studio entirely:

"Personalize your dream home with our curated choices and expert designers. Your design studio experience starts here."

Not a store. Not a showroom. An experience with a partner.

The page then works through every layer of buyer anxiety in sequence. Premium brand partnerships (Moen, Caesarstone, Sherwin-Williams, Blanco) establish quality before the buyer has to ask. Step-by-step guidance removes decision fatigue. Granular upgrade pricing creates transparency. A Gold award from The Nationals validates the buyer's choice with third-party authority.

It closes with a pivot to a second buyer persona entirely:

"Explore our collection of design-curated, warranty-covered Quick Move-Ins. Imagine the peace of mind to simply move in and enjoy your home from day one, no hidden surprises."

One page. Two buyer types. Neither one left without a next step.

Example Social Post | East Preserve, Oakville

"It's time for you to learn more about the final release in Oakville's East Preserve Community. Discover stunning Urban Rear Lane Townhomes with double-car garages built for you and your growing family. Explore this truly unique community at the link in our bio."

The carousel pairs the East Preserve community logo and product shot with a lifestyle image of a young family laughing in nature. The home and the life it unlocks are shown together without a word of explanation. The copy and the creative are making the same argument.

THE RESULTS

- 300+ assets produced across the national portfolio
 - 21.4% YoY revenue growth
 - $4.45B company milestone
 - Full corporate website rebuilt and launched

WHY IT WORKED

Real estate copy fails when it describes. It succeeds when it imagines. The brief required writing that could make someone picture Sunday morning coffee on a back porch in a community that didn't exist yet. The copy that performed best was the copy that trusted the reader and gave them just enough to see themselves there, and let their imagination do the rest.

CASE STUDY 03: BGC CLUB DAY

Client: BGC Canada

Role: Copywriter, Campaign Lead

Deliverables: Event Copy · Campaign Messaging · Social Content · Press · Partner Coordination

THE BRIEF

BGC Canada wanted to create a national day of celebration for its 600+ Clubs and the kids, families, and communities they serve. A feel-good charity day wasn't enough. It needed to feel like an event people genuinely wanted to be part of, not just something they were asked to support.

THE IDEA

Turn a national nonprofit into a national celebration.

Bring in partners with genuine cultural reach. Light up the country in BGC green. Give people a reason to show up, share, and pay attention. Make BGC impossible to ignore for one day.

THE WORK

Campaign Copy and Messaging

Wrote all event copy and campaign messaging across digital, social, and partner communications, from the initial awareness push through to event day content, maintaining a voice that was warm, energetic, and community-first throughout.

Media Release | BGC Club Day

Social Content | Example Social Post

The social campaign told the Club Day story through the people it was built for: staff, alumni, and community members whose lives BGC shaped.

"Having dedicated over 7 years to @bgc_es, Shintelle's Club journey has been inspiring. From After School Program Lead Staff to Youth Program Coordinator to Social Media Specialist, she has impacted countless young lives. Now, as BGC Canada's new Partnership Support Specialist, she shares: 'From hot summer camp days to my first job, the Club allowed me to grow in my career and pursue a job in my field of study.' Join us on Friday, June 2, to celebrate #BGCClubDay and the #UnbelievableImpact of Clubs."

The formula was consistent: a real person, a real journey, the same invitation. Personal enough to stop the scroll. Specific enough to be believed.

Partners and Cultural Reach

Walk Off the Earth performed live on BGC's Facebook and tweeted about Club Day to their following, turning a nonprofit event into a genuine cultural moment with organic amplification from voices people actually follow.

CityTV Breakfast Television and CBC Evening News both covered Jully Black's visit to BGC East Scarborough. Jully Black posted about Club Day on her own social media before and after the event, extending the campaign's reach into her audience without a paid placement.

Civic Activations | View Activations

41 civic activations across Canada, including 5 municipal proclamations recognizing June 2, 2023, as BGC Club Day, BGC flags raised at 11 City Halls, and 25 landmarks lit up in BGC green, including the CN Tower, Niagara Falls, the Montreal Olympic Stadium, and more.

THE RESULTS

- 150,000+ youth and families connected
 - 3M+ social impressions
 - 1.5M+ people reached on social media
 - 47 print news articles across Canada
 - 41 civic activations and 25 landmarks lit in BGC green
 - CityTV and CBC Evening News coverage
 - Walk Off the Earth Facebook Live and organic tweet
 - Jully Black's organic social posts

WHY IT WORKED

The brief asked for awareness. The campaign delivered credibility. Earned media, organic celebrity amplification, civic buy-in from 11 city halls, and a country turned green aren't things you buy. They're things you earn when the creative and the cause are strong enough that people want to be associated with them. Club Day proved BGC wasn't just a charity. It was a cultural institution worth celebrating.
